Bus Donated To OIC By Youths

On January 18, 1971, at the First Congregational Church, 403 South Jefferson at 2:00 p.m. the Saginaw Opportunities Industrialization Center was presented with a mini-bus. The presentation was made to Rev. Roosevelt Austin, Chairman of the Board of Directors of OIC, Mr Marty Stark, Chairman of the Advisory Board of OIC; Mr James R. Campau, Director of Job Development of OIC and members of the OIC Executive Committee. The presentation was made by Rev. Gary Miller of the First Congregational Church and members of the First Congregational Youth Group in behalf of the Roswell Burrows Youth Memorial Fund.

The Youth Group of the church being very conscientious young men and women wanted to do something for persons less fortunate than themselves. They took on a project of helping a worthwhile organization by providing something to help the disadvantaged. Many organizations were considered and after serious deliberation OIC was picked as a very deserving organization. The Youth Group has been working very diligently at this project for the past five months. After a successful concert which featured Lionel Hampton, part of the proceeds went to buy this bus. This is the prime example of what some teenagers in the City of Saginaw have done, especially those of the First Congregational Church, to help their fellow man. These teenagers gave of their time and talent so people less fortunate than themselves could receive a second chance at life.

The bus will be used to transport trainees from the depressed hard-core area of the City of Saginaw to the OIC Training Center at Downes School.

English Comp Is Urgent

by Willie Allen

If the aim of the teaching of composition is to teach the student to write well and easily about a subject of importance, it follows that a disadvantaged student in the area of composition is the student who writes poorly if at all, and who writes reluctantly and with much difficulty. Obviously, this student may come from an excellent background, but he is more apt to come from a minority or poverty background, or a home in which another language is spoken.

I'm not talking of the undermotivated student who might have a brilliant future if he went to college, he writes so beautifully; nor am I speaking of the one with ability and drive, but no money. I'm not even talking about the child who writes, but not in our language — the language of "It is I." I'm concerned for the child who can't write in any language, acceptable or unacceptable, what he feels about his world, about himself, or about his feelings. Often his self-image is so negative he feels what he has to say doesn't matter and would not be accepted or understood anyway. In some cases he has become to numb to attempt to formulate his ideas. On the other hand, he may have ideas, but the whole world of written expressions has been made to look so formidable to him as to be unconquerable. Usually this student is verbal enough among his peers; getting him to talk in class may help him to feel his ideas may be listened to, but it does not teach him to write.

Whether these students exist as small, incommunicative islands in a good class or are in a total continent of incommunicative class, I feel that the teacher's philosophy of composition and her understanding of the psychology of the writing mind are basic to his success.

Operation Andrew Is A Big Success

On Sunday Jan. 17, Bethel AME Church reaches it heights in Operation Andrew. The scenery was unusual but very beautiful. Members of Bethel came dressed as they dress and work around the house.

Their appearances might have been different, but the spirit was there and I do mean there! Rev. Huggins spoke about the Hand of Clay and the magic in which it was used by God.

After the heart-warming messages of Rev. Huggins reached the people. The Bethel Choir reached out and touched every one of their hearts with the beautiful song which was sung by their soulful voices. If you for one minute think that you have to be dressed up to feel the spirit, you should have been there Sunday.

After services, everyone was invited to the Fellowship Hall for a dinner. It was a graceful meal which was well prepared such as neckbones, pig's feet, Black eyed peas and chittlings.

HOOPLA: Dave Bing of the Pistons scoring layup after faking out Lew Alcindor of Bucks at Milwaukee yesterday. Bing led Detroit scoring with 25 points. Bucks won, 118-100.

Median Wage Gain Reaches New High

An all-industry figure of 27.9 cents an hour was the median negotiated wage increase in the first nine months of 1970, according to the Bureau of National Affairs. This is the largest step-up for any corresponding period in the last decade. It represents a 5.7 cent advance over the same period of last year.

Construction led the increases with a median settlement of 90.4 cents, 30.8 cents in printing and publishing, airlines, trucking and warehousing; 30.7 cents in utilities; and 30.6 cents in communications.

A Recipe For Good Living

by DEMERIS BIGGINS

The most enjoyable thing people like to do is eat! The young, old, heavy and thing enjoy exercising their digestive system. Life has a digestive system, too. Accepting and not accepting facts of life's reality. Usually much of the wrong thing he vomits. It's the same way in life. When a person accepts to much of life, his mind vomits. In other words a nervous breakdown. Greedy people eat all they can get their hands on. Then there's so much extra weight, it starts affecting other parts of the body. They really become a sick person. A bad heart, vein trouble and so on. Well, a person who accepts every little fact or fault unnecessary gets the weight of pressure. There is so much there, he can't hold it. Then there's bad headaches, nervousness and so on. Pills! Liquor!

Aspirins! Prescriptions! and all the other supposed to be curses, harming both digestive system. You see how such an enjoyable human activity can harm you before you know it?

For those who like to cook and for those who do not, just read this recipe and you will be surprised how good it tastes.

1 cup of Good Thoughts
1 cup of Kind Deeds
1 cup of Consideration for Others

2 cups of Sacrifices for Others
3 cups of Forgiveness
2 cups of Well Beated Faults

Mix these thoroughly and add tears of joy and sorrow and sympathy for others. Fold in your cups of prayer and faith to lighten other ingredients and to raise the texture to a great height of Christian Living and after pouring all this into your daily life, bake with the Heart of Human Kindness. Serve with a smile.

Fenton Farmer Has Plan For Low-Cost Retiree Haven

BY June Brown Garner

The small towns of Michigan have a great concern for the problems of big cities and they try to solve them in a warm-hearted small-town way.

Walter Mosley, 44, who is one of 10 black people in Fenwick, Mich., is disturbed because elderly people in the ghetto are beaten, robbed and killed. Ordinarily a man 150 miles from Detroit would feel helpless to solve Detroit's problems, but Mosley spends seven days a week working on a solution.

He and his wife, Mary, live on a 68-acre farm with their five-year-old son Cordell. They enjoy fishing in their large private lake, where he catches and mounts trophy-sized pike, and they enjoy sitting on their patio watching the deer come out of the woods. But Mosley knows that city people love the outdoors as well as he does, so he frequently walks around the Oldsmobile factory in Lansing where he works and invites workers he's never seen before to bring their families to his farm, where he entertains them without charge.

The joy city people experience at his farm encouraged him to tackle the problems faced by inner city retirees.

He's not a rich man, but he's an excellent carpenter and for the past year he has rushed home from the factory and spent half the night building four kitchenette apartments, each with a private pastel bath. He's purchased new stoves and refrigerators, he's done all the masonry work himself, poured his own concrete and installed all the plumbing.

"There must be a lot of older people who'd enjoy living on our farm," he says.

"It's safe here — they can walk outside day or night and no one will ever bother them. Whatever their color, if they're afraid to live in Detroit, they're welcome to come to the country and live on my farm."

Mosley has already completed one of the apartments and the other three will be finished before the year ends. He plans to charge $125 a month, which will include all furniture and utilities, a private boat, and an acre of land where the retiree can raise his own chickens or grow his own produce.

Older people who want to escape from the ghetto forever or for only a day can go to the farm and look around.

Another person trying to help the inner city is an ardent horsewoman, Georgia McKinley of Fenton. She writes a column for The Detroit News sports section called The Show Ring, but much of her time is spent going to horse shows and horse sales.

A horse show is the only sport in which a big percentage of the competitors are not only under 18 but can also hold their own against practiced professionals.

Inner city children have an overwhelming love of horses, but very few attend the horse shows and even fewer participate. It's partly because many inner city children never own a horse and never have an opportunity to practice horseback riding, partly because many of them don't know what to expect at a horse show and partly because they're not sure they would be welcome.

At the recent Detroit Junior Livestock and Horse Show at the Michigan State Fairgrounds, youngsters exhibited cattle, sheep and hogs, but the 83 horseback riding and showing events were the favorites.

Every young person who loves horses enjoys seeing youngsters his own age handling beautiful horses of all breeds.

The livestock show satisfies most young people's love of horses, but others love horses so much they want more. Knowing this, Georgia has contacted several of the leading horse breeders in and around Oakland County and asked them to give the young readers of this column a tour of their ranches and also exhibit their horses.

Any young person under 18 who would enjoy being part of a group of 10 or less which will spend an afternoon looking at horses, learning to recognize the different breeds and being taught many things that horse breeders know, is welcome.

Just send me a postcard with your name, address, zip code and phone number. If you have a special preference such as Appaloosa, Quarter Horse, American Saddle Bred, Thoroughbred, etc., make a note of it; we'll try to arrange a tour of that farm.

Many businessmen near high schools breathe a sigh of relief when school lets out in June and almost go into mourning when it reopens in September, but not Ed Cartwright, who operates a Gulf station near Cass Technical High School.

He's been operating his business there since May, 1956 and he says the students at Cass Tech should be given credit for the way they conduct themselves.

"Even on the days they have demonstrations, their manners don't change; they are just as polite as always," Cartwright says.

"If they can do it at Cass, they can do it all over."

Powdered Rubber Uses Corn Starch

Corn starch and wheat flour are successfully tested new ingredients for the processing of powdered rubber.

Experiments have been conducted by Russell A. Buchanan, a research chemist at the United States Department of Agriculture's Northern Regional Laboratory at Peoria, Ill., over a four-year period.

He said that starch improves the quality and strength of rubber and would wind up about 10 percent cheaper in price.

Through the use of corn starch and wheat flour higher speed machinery and automated processes may be utilized.

He added that the big rubber companies are working on the development of a powdered rubber for the fabrication of rubber products and the Department of Agriculture now can give exclusive licenses for use of and work on the powder in exchange for an agreement that a company or companies will further develop the process.

Mavry Wills Traing For Alston's Job

Maury Wills was a raw busher, desperately trying to eke out a living playing ball for the Hornell (N.Y.) team in the Pony League, but that was 20 years ago.

Today, Willis, a $95,000 a year shortstop for the Dodgers, a sure-fire future Hall of Famer and an entertainer who can command a fat, four-figure weekly salary in the Las Vegas area, is right back where he started — in the bushes.

There is a difference though. Maury is in Hermosillo, bustling capital of the Northern Mexico state of Sonora, learning how to manage a baseball club.

And he is doing quite well in his newest endeavor. His Naranjeros Hermosillo (Orange Pickers) got off to a horrible start, but finished a strong second in the first half of the Mexican version of the pennant race. They broke through the barrier with the help of Wills and seven successive victories.

The question is, however, what is Maury Wills doing in an alien land running a motley baseball team for a meager $2000 a month when he could earn ten times that by strumming his guitar and twanging his banjo in Nevada?

Wills has a ready answer to that question: "I want to be the first Black manager in the major leagues," he stated adamantly.

There are other eligible elder statesmen — Willie Mays, Ernie Banks, both 39-years-old and Frank Robinson, 35, — who might beat Maury to that enviable position, but that still does not deter the dedicated Dodger from seeking managerial status.

Wills' managerial preference is with the team that liberated Black baseball players, when they introduced Jackie Robinson to the major leagues in 1947. Branch Rickey was the personage who achieved the integration of the Brooklyn Dodgers and major league ball.

Maury is neither coy nor ambiguous in his discussion of his ultimate goal — to succeed the man he most admires in baseball. Walter Alston.

Alston, who turned 59 in December, is certainly in no hurry to abandon his lucrative work with the Dodgers and be relegated to his wood-working shop, stables and pool table in Darrtown, Ohio, but Maury is willing to bide his time.

"If Alston manages another 5 years, I'll play another five years," stated Wills, fleet base-stealer for the Dodgers. "I maybe 38, but I feel that I can keep going for a long time, barring any serious injury, of course," Wills said in a recent interview.

The Dodger high command is well aware of Wills' aspirations to be at the tip-top managerial position and is careful not to offer him any encouragement as long as Alston wants to run the ball club, a task he has done proficiently since 1954 and with eminent success.

Sportsmanship Is Reinstated

by Rosalinda Ovalle

On January the fifth, 1971 St. Joseph's School played against St. Petes and Pauls' basketball team. They had a scuffle at the end of the game over a complete misunderstanding over the scores. We asked ourselves: "Which one if one!"

Today's sports have their own rules and regulations. Coaches and their teams must have spirits, but also, they should know how to compete fairly with their competitors. Therefore, our school was already thought of as being fighters and not any basketball players. So our players were ashamed of what had happened that night yet embarrassed at what had been reported in the newspaper. We know that the game was not scored correctly, but that it wasn't fair for them to get the credit either. This was our misunderstanding.

Now, on January 18th, our school's coach and team, both received letters from St. Petes and Pauls', saying that they are sorry for their behavior on that night and that the score was made to be ours, or that we may have another game with them. So we have ours and they have their spirits back. We have accepted their apology, as we apologize, hoping they accept ours just as well!

Radiation Used To Purify Sewage

Water which had been raw sewage hours earlier is being made fit for drinking in an experimental plant in Fish-eating Creek, Fla.

The sewage is transformed into pure, odorless, water like a slightly warm distilled water by gamma radiation in the first commercial nuclear sewage disposal plant built in the United States.

The $87,000 plant essentially treats sewage in the usual way, according to Dr. David D. Woodbridge of the Florida Institute of Technology, and just before final filtering the effluent is bombarded with rays from radioactive Cobalt-60.

Some 10,000 gallons are treated daily, with as much as 22,000 gallons on peak weekend days. The plant is a joint project of Energy Systems, Inc. and Lykes Brothers,

JAMES v. GLENN
Innocent guys finish first.

Sprint For An Acquittal

If an honest man has no need to flee the law, as the maxim says, does a disinclination to run indicate innocence? Frankie Lee Glenn, 30, a Florida laborer, made that case for himself in a Dade County court last July and proved his point with an unusual demonstration. Glenn had been picked up in a bar during a gambling raid. If he had been guilty, he contended, he would most likely have run for it. His experience as a high school sprinter and halfback was all he needed to outdistance an ordinary flatfoot. "We'll see," said Judge Everett Dudley. Acting as starter himself, the judge presided over a 50-yard race between Glenn and Vernon James, the officer who had made the arrest. Glenn won the contest — and the acquittal. Verdict: not guilty.
